Hon. John Rundolph Tucker at Cartersville [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] CARTERSVILLE, VA., September 23, 1884. S. J. H. Tucker spoke here today, and it being his first speech in this community, his fame as a public man and great orator brought out a large audience of the best and most intelligent portion of our population, both gentiemen and ladies. They came out anticipating a great treat, and they were not disappointed. His speech was a grand effort. He spoke for nearly four hours, holding the whole time the un-flagging attention of his hearers. Solid, sound, instructive, and eloquent, and at the same time so plain and comprehensive explained the principles and policy of e Democratic party and the principles of policy of the Republican party. He inciples in its constant tendency to build a favored classes at the expense of the asses, and to encroach upon and usurn a reserved rights of the States. In the moreover, how dangerous to the rights and liberties of the people were these central-izing tendencies of the Republican party, and how important it is to put the Demo-cratic party in power in order to stop this downward tendency of our Government. , corruption, and extravagance of the party was terrific Never before have I witnessed such high and universal appreciation of a public speaker. Never have I witnessed such manimity of feeling and settinger that intelligent audience there was only o discenting voice. There is another thing that has gladdened the hearts of our people, and it is that we have at last found deliverand it is has we have a restround denver-snee from aften and hostile representation in the councils of the republic; that amongst other good things done by our present Legislature the county of Cumber-land has been taken out of the "black distriet," and put where we can have a rep-resentative who is of us and with us-a resentative who is of us and with us—a true Virginian and good man.

Allow me, in conclusion, to add a few reflections of my own which these events have excited in my mand. There is much clamor at the North about the "Solid South," and one of the greatest desideratums in Republican circles is to break the "Solid South," At this particular juncture it is most fortunate that the South is solid—solid as it is for law and order, for a safe and respectable government; solid a safe and respectable government; solid for the Constitution and for the great fun-damental principles of the Democratic party. The South constitutes the great conserva-tive element of the country. The sorrows, suffering, and humination imposed upon the South by Radical rule, have, in the providence of God, been blessed and sanc-ified to our good, and, as I verify believe, to the salvation, of our resulting matingmake our people more moderate, thought-ful, and conservative. They have learned to better appreciate the blessings of good government as well as to detest and abhor radicalism of every kind. I verily believe that if it were not for the conservatism of the south our peculiar form of government would sooner or later undergo an entire

There are two elements in our body polithe that are threatening the perpetuity of our institutions. One is the great money power, and the other is the ignorance of the lower classes. Hoarded wealth is al-ways hostile to and distrustful of the liberties of the people. It wants a strong government for its protection and preservation, and it places these far above the rights and berties of the people. There is nothing uer than that "the price of liberty is ernal vigilance." W. H.

The Drought-Washington Sportsmen Purchasing Virginia Islands-Political and Builroad Matters.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] ONANCOCK, September 24, 1884.
The long hot and dry spell continues here, and it is now estimated that hardly two thirds of an average crop of corn and potatoes—the two leading staples of this section—will be gathered. In some localities not half a crop is expected. In consequence of this, the people are somewhat despondent and business is very dull. It is estimated from tolerably correct data that about one million burrels of sweet and light perfect one subtract from Accountry.

A Temperance Sermon-Off to Pelham for a Time-Office Closed-Church Items-Spenking Here and Thece.

An event of this week was a sermon on "Temperance as Taught in the Bible," by Rev. P. H. Fontaine, of Halifax county. Admitting that alcohol is a "creature of God" and is to be "used with thanksgiving," as soap is and may be, he argued that the using of any creature of God with thanksgiving implied that it was to be used in the manner intended, and that alcohol is to be used only as a medicine. He then set forth that there is in the Hebrew one word that is invariably used for the wine to be used as food, which word he said was used in the Bible forty-two times, many of which passages he quoted; and next he set forth that there was an entirely different word invariably many passages in which that word is used for the wine that is forbidden as a beverage.

During the progress of the circus parade down Bank street to-day an alarm of fire was vigorously sounded, which for a time was vigorously sounded, which for a time caused much confusion. Distressing accounts of the effects of the drought continue to be received from all the counties in this section. The drought is general, and the damage to the crops can hardly be estimated. ICOTOSPONISECE OF the Richmond Dispatch.]

SEPTEMBER 22, 1884.

The City Council held a meeting yesterday afternoon to consider a proposition to purchase the First Baptist church building, on Church street, for the purpose of converting it into a city hall. The question was variously discussed by the members, and the proposition finally rejected, the building being regarded as unsuitable for the purpose. The price asked was $9,000. The scheme met with great favor in the community, but not with much favor from those who had the decision of the question. Judge Latham, of the Corporation Court, vesterday decided the case of the Norfolk and Western and Richmond and Alleghany Raitroad Companies vs. The City of Lynchburg, for the recovery of $1.000 of taxes paid "for doung a railroad business," in favor of the plaintiffs. The New York Herald of yesterday The New York Herald of yesterday gives the following additional particulars of the assault upon Mr. Fulton, editor of the Baltimore American, by Mr. Clif. W. Tayleur, The latter gentleman is well known in Richmond, and at one time was on the staff of the old Enquirer:

When he strolled out of the Morton Bouse into Union Square vesterday after-noon, Mr. A. K. Fulton, the editor of the noon, Mr. A. K. Fulton, the editor of the Belt'more American, who was so severely caned the day before by Mr. Clifton W. Tayleur, literally had blood in his eye, He is a tall, stout, handsome man of fifty years, with a military, grayish moustache and a gentlemanly bearing, and exected the semurable of all who saw him. His face and a gentlemanly bearing, and excited the sympathy of all who saw him. His face and head were a mosaix of court-plaster. A big pair of new bine goggles bridged his said Mr. Fulton, elinching his fists, "and I believe that was his only reason for coming to New York. He has been at Long Branch all summer, and must have heard of my rrival here. He was formulably armed and struck with all his strength. He had a loaded cane. It was no ordinary stick that inflicted these wourds. It was stick that inflicted these woulds. It was one of these wire, leather-covered canes, with a lump of lead in the handle. I did not see him until he approached me with the ferrule end of the cane in his hand. He had three men with him. I was talking to some friends, and as I explied him I expended my handlend said at Hello Cili are tended my hand and said, " Hello, Clif., are you willing to bury the hatchet?"

"Then you admit that I was right to publish what I did about you and your father?" he replied, cynically.

"No, said I, I do not think you were good?" Then necessing a refusal from

"Na, said I, 'I do not think you were right." Then, on receiving a refusal from me to retract what I had published about him he raised the cane and hit me a stun-ning blow over the right eye. I was dazed, and could not close in upon him before he had dealt several other blows, and had backed up sgainst that iron railing there where you see those blood spots. Then I got him into chancery, and the coward cried to the bystanders to take me away." "Was Mr. Tayleur sober?"

"Perfectly."
"What was the criticle that caused him "What was the criticle that caused him to feel grieved against you?"

"A reply that I published in the Boston Herald to an article he had written for that paner alleging that my father and I had been rebels during the war. He said that we had printed an editorial to the effect that Federal troops should not be allowed to pass through Baltumore, and I branded the yarn as false."

"What object had Mr. Tayleur in publishing the article. You were always lishing the article. You were always friends, were you not?" "We had always been the best of friends. He was on the American during the war. The only object he could have had was no-toriety. He is a hoi-headed fellow, and, I presume, assaulted me because I contra-dicted his statements."

WILL HAVE RECOURSE TO LAW. WILL HAVE RECOURSE TO LAW.

A prospective duel was freely talked of among the friends of Mr. Fulton. When asked what he interded to do about the matter Mr. Fulton said that he would have Mr. Tayleur arrested as soon as he came into the State, and that he would make the matter a personal one as well. Mr. Fulton added that when he was pulled away from Tayleur the latter fled into the Morton House wash-root, and then, when Mr. Fulton went there, burried out again into Fulton went there, burried out again into a saloon on Broadway, where he washed the blood from his face and whence he started back to Long Branch. Mr. Fulton said he would not go to the trouble of se-curing a requisition for Tayleur's arrest. A Herald reporter went to Long Branch o see Mr. Tayleur and found that that get tleman was in Attleboro', Mass., as mana ger of the Frank Chanfrau "Kit" Combi nation. Up to two weeks ago he had summering at Mr. Chanfrau's cottage. MRS. CHANPEAU NOT SURPRISED.

was astonished and quite annoyed when I read the story in the Herald this morning of Mr. Tayleur's encounter with Mr. Fulton," said Mrs. Chanfrau, "but I have been expecting that Mr. Tayleur would assault Mr. Fulton ever since Mr. Futton's publication regarding him in the Boston Herald. No high-minded gentlemen can stand being accused of falschood. And besides, Mr. Tayleur 16 one of the most hot-headed men I ever knew. I have seen him in a great many altereations, and it is a wonder to me that he has not be killed. When he becomer angry he knows nothing of what he is doing."
"Did Mr. Tayleur mention the purpose of his visit to New York when he left here on Tuesday?"

"He was not here on Tuesday, and has not been here in two weeks. He is managing our 'Kit' combination, and telegraphed to me on Yuesday that he had come into New York from the country to transact some business. He expected to go back to his company on the 2 P. M. train, and must have been on his way to the depot when he met Mr. Futton. The two men were in Baltimere tegether looking for each other, but their friends kept them apart."

"What kind of a cane did Mr. Tayleur carry?"

An Irish black-thorn that he obtained in Montreal. It was one that he prized hery highly, and had a big knob-handle."

"Mr. Fulton says the cane Mr. Tayleur ness him with was loaded."

"Cn, ne, it was not. We know the cane cure.

he carries. Jenny (referring to her maid), we've minded that cane many a time, baven't we?"

Mrs. Chanfrau could tell of no reason for the militation by Mr. The model of the artithe publication by Mr. Tayleur of the arti-cle in the Boston Herata reflecting upon Mr. Fulton, except that he was a regular contributor to the papers. She spoke of Mr. Tayleur in the highest commendatory tones, and said that his only fault was his temper.

PRILADELPHIA, September 28.—A new suit has been brought in the courts of this city by Father Stack, Roman Catholic priest, against Bishap O'Hara because of the Bishop's continued refusal to reinstate the priest in he professional office. The present suit has created much surprise, inasmuch as it was supposed that the former difficulties had been settled at Rome about a year ago, when Father former difficulties had been settled at Rome about a year ago, when Father Stack visited the Propaganda and was recognized in his priestly capacity by being permitted to celebrate mass in Saint Peter's. However, after his return to America the Bishop still objected to giving him an appointment unless he would sign an appointment unless he would sign an apology for having sought redress in the civil courts, and renounce all right to invoke their aid in the future, and also return the position advanced in the controversy. This was declined by the priest. The subject at issue has been twice before that the position are as a very. This was declined by the priest. A Professional Girl Burglar.

(By telegraph to the Dispatch.)
NEW YOLK, September 26.—In the Court of Sessions, Brooklyn, Ella Larrabee, who pleaded guilty to burglary in the third degree, was sentenced to the penitentiary for three years and six months. She is but twenty years old, is handsome and refined-looking, but is known to the police as a professional burglar. She has already served two sentences—one of six months and another of a year for burglary. Danie Shugrue, a young Connecticut farmer, rea-about her in the papers, and came here to see her. He immediately fell in love with her, and for the past two weeks has been persecuting the Indee, district attorney, and other officials with petitions to permit om to marry her and take her with him to connecticut. Ela was willing to marry
